Near Serb siege on Sarajevans ends

Weary survivors recall years of war

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — In the spring of 1992, Serb guns sprouted from the hills around Sarajevo. But until the first shots were fired, few residents of the Bosnian capital believed their former neighbors would become their killers.

Four years later, Sarajevans call themselves survivors of hell. They have been shot at, shelled, starved and, most of all, surrounded. When the siege formally came to an end Thursday, many residents barely noticed.

"It is one of the most important days in the history of this country, and yet we are too tired to even celebrate," said Nedim Londrc, a 28-year-old writer sitting at the Estrada cafe.

The siege ended four years to the day after Muslims and Croats voted in a referendum to declare Bosnia independent from Serb-led Yugoslavia. Serbs in Sarajevo, furious at the prospect of Muslim-Croat rule, boycotted the vote.

Hours after the results were announced — late March 1, 1992 — Serbs threw up the first barricades in Sarajevo. Someone scrawled on the main post office: "This is Serbia." A quick wit scrawled in reply: "No, you fool, this is the post office."

Armed Serbs in black ski masks peeked out from behind the barricades, from behind the buses that blocked a main bridge spanning the city's Miljacka River.

Radio warned people to stay indoors. But by March 3, Sarajevo's people rebelled at being pinned down by Serb militants. They broke through the barricades on the main street.

To their shock, troops inside Yugoslav army barracks opened fire on the crowds, wounding several people.

For the first time, many Sarajevans realized that the Serb-dominated army — touted for 50 years as an even-handed force for all Yugoslavia's peoples — had turned against them.

The Bosnian Serbs acquired most of the weaponry of the Yugoslav Army when it pulled back from the conflict and used it to cement the siege of Sarajevo.

The first fatality came April 5. Suada Dilberovic, a 24-year-old student, was killed by a Serb sniper during a peace rally.

At this point, people could still get in and out of Sarajevo. Residents jammed the airport, trying to flee. Convoys of buses and cars streamed out of the city.

Many who left then — and during

Thatcher to grace Y assembly, receive honorary doctorate

By ASHLEY EYRING
Universe Staff Writer

Lady Margaret Thatcher, former prime minister of England, and President Gordon B. Hinckley, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will speak at Tuesday's convocation at 11 a.m. in the Marriott Center.

Noon classes on Tuesday have been cancelled so that students won't have to leave the assembly early.

"Arriving late and leaving early would be extremely offensive to the Thatchers," said Erlend D. Peterson, chairman of commencement and dean of admissions for BYU.

Thatcher will receive an honorary doctorate degree from BYU.

Then she will address the BYU community.

Former BYU president Rex E. Lee is also scheduled to receive an honorary doctorate degree in the field of law. Even though Lee has experienced recent health concerns, BYU plans to go ahead with the honor.

President Hinckley will then offer concluding remarks following Thatcher's address.

"This is a tremendous honor for BYU," said Ronald J. Clark, director of BYU guest relations and public affairs. "It shows the establishment of BYU outside the community."

"BYU has wanted to recognize Lady Thatcher's contributions for several years," Peterson said. "Her busy schedule has kept her (from speaking) in the past."

Thatcher's contributions began seven or eight years ago when Marvin J. Ashton served with his wife as mission president in England and started the ground work for the BYU visit, Clark said.

"Margaret Thatcher has been an incredibly important stateswoman," said W. Ladd Hollist, professor of political science.

"She is perhaps most respected for her foreign policy work during the Cold War era."

Thatcher is called the Iron Lady by Britons because of her unyielding ways, he said.

"She is controversial. She will say what she honestly believes; what you hear is what she believes," Hollist said.

Thatcher's visit will kick off a month-long program, called the U.K.-Utah Festival, to foster good will between Utah and the United Kingdom, Clark said.

"By honoring Lady Thatcher, we emphasize the strong and ongoing ties with Britain," he said.

"A large population of the state of Utah are direct descendants of the British Isles."

Security will be tightened for the convocation exercise, Clark said.

Scotland Yard came to BYU for its preliminary briefing Feb. 28.

"There will be a very strong University Police presence and possibly city police as well," Clark said.

Thatcher will be accompanied by her husband, Sir Denis, along with her personal secretary and the head of the Lady Thatcher Foundation from Washington, D.C., Peterson said.

The convocation will be broadcast on KBYU-TV and KBYU-FM at 11 a.m. and will be rebroadcast March 24 at 6 and 11 a.m.

Adding to the rivalry is the fact that most of the games in recent years have been important for both teams.

Rating implementation the 'arduous' process

Associated Press

INGTON — Under pressure from parents and politicians, the television industry promised Thursday to rate programs that warn of bad sex. "They're handing remote control back to parents," President Clinton ise to rate thousands of programs by the end of the year during a White House initiative between Clinton and about 20 television and entertainment industry executives.

so pressed his interest in ratings to air at least three hours of educational programs the broadcasting industry set quotas, TV executives say they are interested in the quality of program-

"It is not enough for parents to be able to tune out what they don't want their children to watch," Clinton said. "They want to be able to tune in good programs that their children will watch."

"I think (there will be) more Brady Bunch type of programming than cutting edge," said Ted Turner, chief of Turner Broadcasting System Inc.

TV executives envision a system like the one used for movies, but they are a long way from agreement on whether cartoons and news magazine shows should be rated and how to rate soap operas.

A task force of TV executives will begin work Friday to devise ratings criteria and symbols and decide what will and won't be rated.

"I think it's going to be arduous, be tormenting," said Motion Picture Association of America President Jack Valenti, who is overseeing the ratings effort.

Industry executives privately insist news and sports programs won't be rated, but Valenti said no decision had been made.

The system would cover programs on commercial and public television

House proposals for wilderness may impact Utah tourism industry

Editor's Note: This is the last of three articles examining House Resolution 1745 (The Wilderness Bill).

By KATELYN HANDY
Universe Staff Writer

Southern Utah's reddish tint isn't coming from the sandstone these days. It's coming from the burning dispute over wilderness designation.

The proposed wilderness bills, House Resolution 1500 and House Resolution 1745, are the source of fuel for the debate. Whichever way it turns out will affect Utah's color country.

Tourism is the fastest growing segment of Utah's economy; it is up 11 percent from last year, said Phillip Bimstein, mayor of Springdale, a city nestled outside of Zion National Park.

Much of this growth is coming from tourists that travel to see the majestic viewscape and pristine lands of southern Utah, he said.

"Utah is already developing the reputation as being one of the most beautiful states in the nation," Bimstein said. "This translates into more money being spent in the state."

While a majority of southern Utahns' livelihoods are made from tourism, either directly or indirectly, fiery opinions have arisen within the hotbed of controversy between those that want to conserve as much land as possible and those that want to make use of the land.

"I've never lived in a place with an amazing spectrum of two extremes like we have down here," said Desiree Butterfield, public relations/marketing assistant for Utah's Southwest Color Country Travel Council. "There are the very hip environmentalists at one end who have every reason to be concerned. At the other end is the stereotyped rednecks that are staunchly defending their right to use the land."

While most agree that some wilderness needs to be designated, the source of the widening chasm within the population is just how much land will be tied up.

Most environmentalists are in favor of HR 1500, which will designate more land as wilderness.

"If I had my druthers, I'd designate more wilderness," Bimstein said. "But 5.7 million (in HR 1500) is a very fair proposal. HR 1745 is an actual pullback from the wilderness managed now."

However, there are others who feel that too much land is tied up in public land and are in favor of HR 1745, which will leave 1.9 million acres as wilderness.

SANDSTONE ARCHES: Many southern Utahns are concerned over the impact House Resolutions 1500 and 1745 will have on state tourism and livelihood.

"It's easy to say 'let's preserve 8 million acres' but for those living in the rural counties there is no way to enjoy the land or make a livelihood from it," said Roger Carter, president of the Coalition of Resources and Economics (CORE), in Kanab.

For land to be stipulated wilderness there must be 5,000 continuous acres, roadless conditions and a natural appearance containing an opportunity for solitude or primitive recreation, said Russ von Koch, outdoor recreation planner for the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) in Moab.

These stipulations almost completely close off the land, leaving it virtually uninhabitable. While most of the 23 million acres will be taken off of wilderness designation when either bill passes, the BLM must still treat the land as if it were already approved, he said.

"The BLM is required by Congress to manage those areas to protect their wilderness value until Congress makes their decision," von Koch

Killer of Michael Jordan's father convicted

LUMBERTON, N.C. — An ex-convict was convicted of murder Thursday for shooting basketball star Michael Jordan's father during a holdup as he awoke from a nap along a dark highway in his $40,000 luxury car.

Daniel Green, 21, could get the death penalty in the 1993 slaying of James R. Jordan, 57.

According to testimony, Green and his accomplice, Larry Martin Demery, 20, drove around in Jordan's red Lexus for four days after the slaying, picking up dates, and used the dead man's cellular phone to call friends and relatives.

Green also made a video of himself dancing and rapping while wearing Jordan's jewelry — a watch and two NBA rings given to him by his athlete son.

Demery himself was the prosecution's star witness. He pleaded guilty to murder before testifying against Green and also could get the death penalty.

U.S. schools use outdated texts, study finds

WASHINGTON — Textbook publishers say schools are using outdated books and that's harmful to education. School officials say they agree, but they can't replace them because of tight budgets.

The survey, conducted between August and November, was released Thursday by the 200-member Association of American Publishers, a trade group for the book publishing industry. The 11-question survey was mailed to a random sample of 2,000 elementary and secondary school teachers; 878, or 44 percent, responded.

Among the survey findings:

- 42 percent say book shortages mean homework can't be assigned.
- 16 percent say some of their students don't have textbooks in class.
- 39 percent say not all students have textbooks to take home.
- 71 percent say they personally buy extra classroom materials.
- 25 percent reported using textbooks that are more than 10 years old.

FDA OK's toothpaste with soap ingredient

BETHESDA, Md. — Wash your mouth out with soap! That's the message from a toothpaste manufacturer that wants to add an ingredient from antibacterial soaps to its product to fight gum disease.

The ingredient is triclosan, a name that can be found in the fine print on bottles of shampoo but not on tubes of toothpaste.

The Colgate-Palmolive Co. says its paste, called Total, reduces plaque and the gum disease gingivitis and asked the Food and Drug Administration for approval to market it. The FDA approved the toothpaste on Jan. 30 but, concerned about the claims that Colgate wanted to make for it, convened a panel of professors from dental schools Thursday to debate the issue.

The manufacturer claimed that its triclosan-laced toothpaste showed plaque reductions of 11.9 percent and 19.3 percent, respectively, in two tests. The same tests showed gingivitis reduced by 19.3 percent and 29 percent, respectively, Colgate told the panel.

Colgate has been selling Total since 1992 and says it has sold 220 million tubes in nearly 100 countries.

Students should anticipate extra traffic on Campus Drive March 18, as 25 truckloads of iron and steel framing will be brought in to advance construction. The underground site just northwest of the Wilkinson Center is in the process of having cement footings poured.

Demolition is finished in the Eyring Science Center, and new duct work is being installed. The exterior of the building will remain the same.

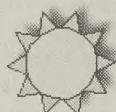

The expansion project underway at the BYU Dairy Products Lab is almost complete. Construction authorities hope to complete the project in about three weeks at which time BYU Dining Take Out Services will move from the Wilkinson Center into the new addition of the BYU Dairy Products Lab.

The J.Reuben Clark Law Building addition will receive its new precast exterior walls in the upcoming week. The exterior finish will match the rest of the building.

On the first floor of the Wilkinson Center, the new Outdoors Unlimited is almost finished. Interior walls will be painted in the next couple of weeks.

Budge Hall renovations will be complete by the first part of April and ready for occupation spring term.

Scripture of the Day

"And now, their preservation was astonishing to our whole army, yea, that they should be spared while there was a thousand of our brethren who were slain. And we do justly ascribe it to the miraculous power of God, because of their exceeding faith in that which they had been taught to believe — that there was a just God, and whosoever did not doubt, that they should be preserved by his marvelous power."

Filing taxes over Internet possible

By PAUL WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

If avoiding filling out tax forms is worth paying a small amount of money to you, then a new tax filing program available over the Internet might be worth looking into.

Intuit, the company that produces the financial software Quicken, has developed QuickTax, a program that can be downloaded from the Internet. It specifically targets college-age students because they don't have as much information to file.

"Filing taxes is a confusing and time-consuming proposition for many people," said Scott Cook, chairman of Intuit. "QuickTax is designed for ease of use and helps young adults quickly and easily prepare their taxes."

To use QuickTax, customers need to visit Intuit's World Wide Web site, <http://www.intuit.com/quicktax>, and download the software, which includes over 30 forms, schedules and worksheets. The customer then answers a few simple questions and the program does all the calculations. When finished, the user prints out the forms, signs them and sends them to the Internal Revenue Service.

QuickTax works on any typical 386, 486 or Pentium personal computer with Windows 3.1 or Windows 95. The cost is $9.95 to download the forms, as opposed to filling it out yourself for free or hiring help from a tax filing company.

Opponents cite faults in House wilderness resolutions

Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles examining House Resolution 1745 (The Wilderness Bill). It is being reprinted because in Thursday's printing of this article a substantial portion was accidentally cut. The third article is on page 1 today.

By GRETCHEN WILSON
Universe Staff Writer

Environmentalists and politicians continue to sling mud and punches in the fight for Utah wilderness lands. In December 1995, the plot thickened as the fight came to a climax but ended with a surprising conclusion — nothing was resolved.

Opponents and supporters of House Resolution 1745 held their breaths as Representative Jim Hansen's (R-Utah) bill almost came up for a vote. Hansen had said he had enough votes to pass the bill. He had support from all members of the Utah Congressional delegation, including Representative Bill Orton (D-Utah), and the support of many Republican members of Congress and his committee. But Hansen pulled the bill.

What happened? Some history might be helpful in solving the mystery.

All members of the Utah Congressional delegation, including Senators Bob Bennett and Orrin Hatch, have received campaign contributions from such companies as Kennecott, the National Cattleman's Association, Chevron and Texaco.

Hatch has sponsored a bill similar to HR 1745 in the Senate. In a USA Weekend article from Nov. 3-5, 1995, Hatch said, "Many acres of prospective wilderness are rich with mineral, oil and gas reserves that, if responsibly developed could contribute significantly to the economy and security of our state and country."

Sam Rushforth, professor of botany and range sciences, said, "It's clear that this is an issue of well-funded groups that stand to gain from developing these lands by essentially offering money to the politicians to write a bill that favors them."

Dave Lemmon, legislative assistant to Orton, disagrees that Orton is catering to campaign contributors.

"I never see lists of our contributors. That way we're not influenced," he said.

Many Utah residents have voiced their dissatisfaction with HR 1745. Lemmon said the majority of constituent responses has largely been against HR 1745 and in favor of HR 1500, a bill which would appropriate 5.7 million acres of land as wilderness.

Rushforth is one of those constituents who supports HR 1500.

"Representative Hansen's people often say this is a bill supported by Easter liberal environmentalists. That is nonsense. This is a Utah citizens bill that after Wayne Owens was not re-elected, Representative Hinchey said, 'I'd love to carry the bill.' He did it as a favor. This is Wayne Owens' bill, and in a very real sense, it's my bill. It's people that worked on this bill," he said.

But Lemmon said neither bill will solve anything. "Orton does not support HR 1745. The main problem he has with the debate is that it centers on either/or. There definitely needs to be some sort of protection for the land, but maybe not wilderness designation. A one-size-fits-all wilderness bill doesn't work either. We need to protect the land, but not all in the same way," he said.

Prior to the almost-vote in December, Orton stated he would reluctantly vote for HR 1745. Now he has his own wilderness proposal.

Orton's wilderness proposal designates 1.2 million acres of land as wilderness and 3.2 million acres as National Conservation Areas. The bill does not contain the hard release language in HR 1745 but creates management plans for the land.

Lemmon said the bill is more flexible than HR 1500. "We'd divide the land into six areas. We'd look at a wide range of different wildlife habitat and other overriding characteristics. One area already has a power plant and we don't want to put those people's jobs in jeopardy," he said.

Ryan Bell, a senior majoring in conservation biology from Huntsville, Texas, is skeptical.

"It's a pretty good bill and has potential to solve problems. But he hasn't specified what will be National Conservation Areas," Bell said.

In a recent Salt Lake Tribune article, former Bureau of Land Management director Jim Baca can't believe the Utah politicians promote wilderness land in Utah, but want to turn it over for development.

Baca has seen photographs of Utah national parks and monuments on the walls of the Salt Lake airport.

In the article, Baca said, "Why do they put it there and promote it? They do it because it attracts people. So why doesn't the political leadership protect it?"

So what happened to Hansen's December vote? With a strong Republican leadership and majority in the House, Republican sponsored bills usually come up for votes quickly and pass. Before key Republican bills come up for votes, the House Majority Whip Tom DeLay (R-Texas) does a "Whip check." Basically, DeLay's staff calls all Republican members of Congress to check on how the member will vote.

Lemmon said the vote, Hansen didn't have the votes, and the Republican leadership is upset that Hansen pulled the bill at the last minute.

The House reconvened Monday after a month long recess. Opponents of HR 1745 were worried that the bill could come back up for a vote in March. Hansen is too.

On the border between New York and New Jersey is the Sterling Forest, a small area of land that contains part of New Jersey's watershed. A bill to receive federal funding to purchase the land is in the works and has received bi-partisan support from both states.

But the bill has to go through Hansen's committee before federal funding can be approved.

Members of the New York and New Jersey Congressional delegation are afraid they'll have to support HR 1745 in order to get the necessary funding for the Sterling Forest.

Rushforth is frustrated. "Hansen has already killed two versions of the bill and right now he's saying, 'Your bill is dead in the water unless you support my bill.' The lawmakers involved with the Sterling Forest are saying, 'We don't want to support Congressman Hansen's bill but we might have to because the Sterling Forest is so important to us.' I hate that. Representative Hansen does that all the time," he said.

Tom Price, of the Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance, agrees.

"Hansen is doing a typical, old-fashioned back room deal. He's holding the environment hostage," he said.

If the Republican leadership is upset at Hansen, a vote in March isn't likely. But that doesn't mean the fight over Utah wilderness lands is over.

Clinton warns Castro not to disrupt memorial

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton today warned Fidel Castro to stop interfering with a memorial service to be held near Cuban waters if armed planes were shot down by U.S. Guard planes and ships.

Clinton said the United States will not tolerate unacceptable behavior by the Cuban government. House press secretary Mary Matalin said Thursday. "We'll make sure there will not be loss of lives such as occurred last time, the government will take steps to prevent American planes from entering Cuban airspace without permission. Such incursions are illegal.

Clinton said, "We have violated Cuban airspace without permission. Such incursions are illegal. We have violated Cuban airspace without permission. Such incursions are illegal."

learning that Cuban MiGs were in the air. The Pentagon denied it.

For the future, McCurry said Clinton was undertaking a series of steps to protect the safety of American citizens and ensure they abide by the law banning unauthorized entry to Cuban territory.

"The president has approved a strong warning to the Cuban government not to violate basic norms of international conduct," McCurry said. "We will not tolerate the loss of American lives."

Further, Clinton directed that Coast Guard ships and planes be at the site of the memorial service to help participants "identify and reach the location" where the planes were downed.

Trying to prevent any provocation, the Coast Guard "will also be on hand to detect and warn against any unauthorized incursions into Cuban waters or airspace," the president's spokesman said.

The president issued orders through the Transportation Department, the Coast Guard's parent agency.

"What we cannot tolerate are people who endanger their lives and further endanger the lives of those who would then be required to protect them, rescue them or deal with them," McCurry said.

U.S. officials have repeatedly warned Brothers and other exile groups against unauthorized entry into Cuban territorial waters or airspace. A case brought by the Federal Aviation Administration has been pending for six months against Jose Basulto, co-founder and president of Brothers, accusing him of flying into Cuban airspace on July 13 without permission.

In House testimony Thursday, Undersecretary of State Peter Tarnoff said Castro, reacting to his deteriorating situation at home, gave the orders to shoot down the American planes.

Castro probably decided more than a month ago, after Brothers to the Rescue dropped pro-democracy leaflets over Havana, that he would retaliate against the Cuban-American group, Tarnoff said.

THE STAFF OF WILSON DIAMONDS

TRY US ON FOR SIZE

Welcome to the staff at Wilson Diamonds.

The most common compliment we get is that people here are "different." We've also been told they're more friendly, patient, and knowledgeable. Which isn't surprising because we never talk about how to "close" a sale, just how to best serve customers. We consider pressure a poor substitute for substance. That's why for the past 19 years our customers have consistently recommended us to their friends.

BYUSA candidates to debate

Please see related story on page 10

By NOELLE BARKER
Universe Staff Writer

The race to be the next BYUSA president continues today as the four presidential candidates debate issues in the Cougar arena.

All students are invited to attend this second debate from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. with their questions ready for the hopeful candidates.

Students can write their questions down and then they will be randomly selected as topics for the candidates to discuss.

The four presidential and vice-presidential candidate teams will be promoting themselves and their plans. Students will elect one team as the 1996-1997 BYUSA president next week.

Candidates Stephen Whyte, Jeremy Bahr, Randy Ewell and Kristian Watford all agree that most students are not aware of the services BYUSA offers to students as well as the opportunities available to students to serve others on and off campus.

Each of the presidential candidates has his own ideas about increasing awareness of BYUSA among students.

A sampling of topics open to discussion at today's debate includes student service programs, utilizing the service hot line and creating an ideas booth.

Women's history to be celebrated in March

By KERSTIN SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

March is Women's History Month, and celebrating women past, present and future is the theme for activities sponsored by BYU Women's Services and Resources.

The theme, "Celebrating Women: Past, Present, Future," illustrates how women are connected with each other, said Jean Taylor Scott, director of Women's Services and Resources.

Marie Cornwall, associate professor of sociology, will open the events with two presentations titled, "Utah Women Considered" at 2 p.m. on March 6 and 7 in 378 ELWC.

A video documentary of four generations of Utah women will be shown March 6, Cornwall said. She will also present information on Utah women's education level, marriage status and other issues March 7.

Marilyn S. Bateman, wife of BYU President Merrill J. Bateman, will introduce herself and answer questions from the audience March 13 at 3 p.m. in 347 ELWC, Scott said.

"This will be an especially good event to join together as women and meet President Bateman's wife," she said.

Sister Chieko Okazaki, first counselor in the General Presidency of the Relief Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will address how to train future leaders at 11 a.m. in the Varsity Theater March 21.

Campus departments and clubs supporting women will run booths in the ELWC Stepdown Lounge March 18-22, Scott said.

These include Women in Management, Women's Research Institute, VOICE, Women in Science Center, Women's Services and Resources and others.

A list of all the events for Women's History Month is available at the ELWC Information Desk.

Disabled enjoy life with positive attitude

Editor's Note: This story was written in conjunction with Disabilities Awareness Week.

By KERSTIN SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Some challenges are more visible than others. But the way disabled individuals react to their challenges are not unlike others.

The best attitude is to regard a disability as an inconvenience, not a great tragedy, said Jack A. Nelson, associate professor of communications. Nelson, a paraplegic, said he fishes better than most of his friends and has hunted deer every year since he was disabled at 17, except during his mission.

"We all face challenges," he said. "Some are just a little more obvious from the outside. People with physical disabilities may seem very different, but for the most part they are leading normal lives."

John Melville, a junior computer science and pre-med major from San Diego, Calif., has cerebral palsy.

"When I was born, my parents decided they weren't going to treat me any different than my siblings," he said. "I've wanted to go to medical school for as long as I can remember."

He can't write, but he said he uses a laptop computer for classes and tests. He said he can do essay tests at least as fast as fellow classmates, but if it's a chemistry test he needs help from others to write, and this can take longer.

Computers, constitutional law, electronics and medicine are among his interests. "I'm not extremely social, but it's not related to being disabled," he said. "I just like being alone."

Being alone won't be a concern for Rob and Reed Nixon, two brothers paralyzed after an accident last April, said Raelene Nixon, a junior from Northborough, Mass., majoring in family science.

The Nixon brothers were paralyzed after breaking their necks when their van flipped coming home from an activity last April, said Nixon, their sister.

After six months together in the hospital, she said they were able to come home and have recently started attending school.

"Reed is still on time to graduate with his class this year, and he's up for his (Eagle Scout) board of review," she said.

"Just because they have a disability doesn't mean they've changed," she said. "They joke around all the time; they're hilarious."

"Life really gets put into perspective," she said. "You realize how much you can do on your own: rubbing your eyes, cleaning your ears, brushing your own teeth — the little things you take for granted," she said.

Many face disabilities less severe than the Nixon brothers, but Nelson said it's a goal to see disabled people as normal people.

Elder Scott is at 19-stake

By LAUREN COMSTOCK
Universe Staff Writer

Elder Richard G. Scott, a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will speak at the fireside Sunday at the Marriott Center.

Elder Scott, a member of the BYU Board of Trustees, was ordained as an apostle in 1978. He served in the Quorum of the Twelve since April 1984. He was called to the position of the Seventy Oct. 1, 1995.

Elder Scott was born in 1928, in Pocatello, Idaho. He received his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from George Washington University. He completed his graduate work in nuclear engineering at Oakridge, Tenn.

Elder Scott also served in the U.S. Navy.

He serves on the Executive Council of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The fireside will begin at 7 p.m. on KBYU, Channel 3, and will be simulcast on KTVX, Channel 2.

Cheryl Young, a member of the stake presidency, will be the emcee.

Between Feb. 2 and Feb. 20, a computer hard drive valued at $200 was stolen from the computer lab in the William H. Snell Building.

Between 11 p.m. on Feb. 17 and 12:30 a.m. on Feb. 18, a male student's laptop computer was stolen from his truck, possibly while it was parked across the street from the Brick Oven restaurant. He said it also may have occurred while his truck was parked in his driveway.

On Feb. 21 at 2:15 p.m., two female students were questioned about merchandise valued at approximately $25 that had been taken from the BYU Bookstore.

On Feb. 23, University Police recovered $190 worth of stolen traffic signs from four male students.

On Tuesday, four juvenile visitors were questioned about merchandise valued at $150 taken from the store at the Museum of Art.

On Wednesday between 12:15 and 4:43 a.m., a male student's stolen signature card was used to purchase $40 worth of items from vending machines in Helaman Halls.

On Wednesday between 8 and 9 p.m., a 19-year-old male student's basketball valued at $60 was taken from the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse.

Between Feb. 1 and Feb. 22, $112 was stolen from a Food Services vending machine on campus.

PERSONAL INJURY

On Thursday at 12:12 a.m., a 19-year-old female student attempted suicide.

TELEPHONE HARASSMENT

On Sunday at 7:50 p.m., a female employee received an obscene phone call from a male caller on an Especially for Youth phone line.

On Wednesday between 3 and 3:10 p.m., a male victim received a vulgar voice mail message that included racial slurs from a male caller.

CRIMINAL MISCHIEF

On Feb. 23 between 6:30 and 9 p.m., the rear-view mirror of a male's 1994 Buick Skylark was damaged while parked in a BYU parking lot. The cost of repairs is estimated at $50.

On Tuesday at 11 p.m., a male was struck by eggs thrown from a passing car in a BYU parking lot. The car was described as a dark-colored Honda Accord with tinted windows.

JUVENILE PROBLEM

On Saturday between 12 and 2:30 a.m., a female juvenile was found in possession of cigarettes. She then attempted to strike a University Police officer.

LOST PROPERTY

Between Feb. 1 and Feb. 14, a 31-year-old female student's passport was taken from the Cougar area. It was in a manila envelope along with several fingerprint cards.

On Feb. 21 at 9:15 p.m., lost money was found in the BYU Bookstore by a bookstore employee.

Sibling string quartet to play at BYU tonight

By KEVIN ELZEY
Universe Staff Writer

The critically acclaimed Ying Quartet will do a special performance as part of the Performing Arts Series tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the HFAC Madsen Recital Hall.

Made up of three brothers and one sister, the Ying Quartet is one of America's most exciting and enthusiastic young ensembles, critics say.

Noted as a group that "produces a dark and sumptuous sound" and provide performances that are "both riveting and uplifting" according to the New York Times, the Ying Quartet just finished a two year residency with the National Endowment for the Arts Rural Residency Initiative where they were part of a pilot program to bring chamber music to small towns.

Preceding the recital, the Department of Music will host a free seminar and master class by the quartet at 10 a.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall.

The seminar is focused toward young musicians and ensembles trying to break into the music industry. The group will share some of their experiences and insights and experiences of playing in a touring quartet as a family.

The seminar and master class is open to the public and is free. Tickets for the recital are $7 for students, faculty, and staff; $8 for senior citizens and alumni; and $9 for the general public and can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Ticket office at 378-4322.

Y groups join for Temple Square Concert

By JOANNE BUTTERFIELD
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Concert Choir and Chamber Orchestra will come together Saturday to present an evening of classical music including works by Haydn, Ralph Vaughn Williams and Claude Debussy.

The groups will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square as part of the Temple Square Concert Series. Admission is free.

The Concert Choir has 74 members and is under the direction of Mack Wilberg. Clyn Barrus conducts the Chamber Orchestra which consists of 43 members.

Shawn Kidd, a sophomore from Rexburg, Idaho, majoring in vocal performance, said this will be a great concert. Kidd sings baritone in ## Concert Choir.

Kidd said the choir will be performing several pieces including one by Haydn entitled "Te Deum." This is a short choral religious piece, Kidd said.

"This piece is full of lots of energy," Kidd said.

Rosalie Lund said it is a lot of fun working with choirs because of the massive amounts of sound the groups can produce together.

The Chamber Orchestra is one of the smallest orchestras at BYU, Lund said.

The Chamber Orchestra will tour Egypt, Israel and Jordan later this year for one month, Lund said.

The Concert Choir recently returned from a tour taking them to Cheyenne, Wyo., said Mike Jensen, a junior from Brigham City, Utah, who currently is an open major.

'See How They Run' back at local theater

By KEVIN ELZEY
Universe Staff Writer

Because of widespread demand "See How They Run" is back playing at the Hale Center Theater and will run through April 15.

Phillip King's play "See How They Run" is an English farce full of galloping humor and mistaken identity set during World War II.

Anne Swenson, theater co-owner said, "'See How They Run' is the most requested play that we have ever produced. Our patrons are still talking about our last production and it closed over five years ago."

Aside from the traditional yearly showing of "A Christmas Carol", "See How They Run" will be the first play repeated at Hale Center Theater in its six year history.

Dousett will renew his role as the handsome and quick witted Corporal Clive Winton and Pulham will reconstruct his original performance as the meek but lovable vicar, Lionel Toop.

Tickets are available by calling the theater at 226-8600. Admission prices are $5 Mondays, $6 Thursdays, and $7 Fridays and Saturdays.

Jazz revival due to many factors

By ELIZABETH SUMMERHAYS
Universe Staff Writer

Jazz music has had a revival the past twenty years among music lovers. Some say the increased popularity is due to high school jazz bands, the many different types of jazz music and popular young jazz artists.

The increase in jazz's popularity is a national trend, said Steve Call, the director of BYU's Jazz Legacy Dixieland band.

"There are more young jazz artists like (Harry) Connick, Jr. who play jazz that is indicative more to the classic jazz artists like Louis Armstrong," Call said.

"The young artists are searching back to the roots of jazz music."

Clint Payne, a junior from Centerville majoring in human development, is often told he looks like Connick, Jr. Payne said he started listening to Connick Jr. because one of his roommates had a Harry Connick, Jr. CD and he really liked it.

"I started to like jazz in high school because our choir sang some jazz songs that I really liked," Payne said. Payne is one of many Americans who get introduced to jazz in high school programs.

"In the last 20 years, there has been a big jazz movement in the high schools," Call said. "Jazz bands are becoming a big part of the curriculum. The quality of high school jazz bands today is phenomenal."

There is a vast selection of Jazz music. Media Play representative Kevin Eardley said there are 30 different types of jazz music and that there is no favored type of jazz.

Lisa

Ryan, a sophomore from Riverton majoring in art, loves jazz: "Music is important to my family, so it was a big part of my growing up. I like all types of jazz; Glenn Miller, Synthesis, Connick Jr. I love the smooth sound of the heavy blues and I love the brilliant sounds of the fast paced brass songs."

"High school jazz had the greatest effect on my love for jazz. The band really worked together as a team. They portrayed more than music," Ryan said.

"It is a great source of happiness to my soul. I think mainly because of the awe I have for the what can be created through hard work, ability, talent and endurance — jazz music," Ryan said.

Why I know BYU will beat up Utah

I don't know if it's a violent case of optimism or just another common act of stupidity, but I'm going on record — "BYU will beat Utah Saturday night."

I know, it doesn't make sense. After all, Utah is ranked No. 10 in the country. And BYU? Well, they're not. Utah has Keith Van Horn, one of the best players in college basketball. And BYU? Well, they don't. Okay, I'm going to stop before I become depressed.

So why do I think BYU will win? Well, let's just say I have a pretty good feeling about this one, and I'm usually quite in touch with my feelings (hey, I'm a sensitive guy).

Column
by Jon
Mano
Assistant
Sports Editor

To understand the BYU-Utah rivalry, you've got to understand a little bit about the hate which exists between Utah and BYU fans who grew up in Utah. Actually, hate might be too strong of a word — it has awfully strong connotations. I mean, the Bosnian Serbs "hate" the Muslims. Rush Limbaugh "hates" Hillary Clinton. I "hate" slow drivers in the left lane. No, I guess that's right — BYU and Utah fans hate each other.

You see, historically, Utah fans' hate for BYU has been stronger than BYU fans' hate for Utah. Utah fans traditionally have had stronger feelings because BYU usually had the edge, especially in football. If Utah ever swept the basketball series, BYU fans would just smugly say, "Hey, that's okay, it's good for you to win once in a while, because we'll still stomp your sorry, politically-incorrect, defense-is-a-four-letter-word football team."

But since Utah has won the last three football games, BYU fans no longer have that luxury to fall back on. Consequently, animosity (big word for a sports guy) towards the Utes has intensified, and feelings of frustration have naturally carried into the basketball season. In other words, these basketball games mean more because BYU fans hate Utah just as much as Utah fans hate BYU.

Jeez, all this talk about hate. Can't we just be friends? NO!

Now how do the fans' feelings affect the players and the outcomes of games? Actually, they probably don't have much influence. But these disdainful feelings are important if they are held by the players — and only those who grew up in Utah can carry these feelings. Although out-of-state recruits may try valiantly to secure proper feelings of hate for their respective rival school, it's impossible to obtain in four years what it takes a lifetime to cultivate.

So let's take a look at the Utah natives who will take the court Saturday. Let's see, it appears there are six major contributors on BYU's team who grew up in Utah: Todd Christensen, Nathan Cooper, Bryon Ruffner, Randy Reid, Ken Roberts and Justin Weidauer.

Although this game gets any BYU or Utah player excited, these home-grown products' intensity grows even more. Cooper more intense? The kid who's tried to take on half of the WAC this year? Roberts more intense? The little brother of Norman Bates? Ruffner more intense? A guy whose dad says he wishes someone would punch his son at the start of the game so he would play better? One word: scary. Okay two words: really scary.

For Utah, there's one player: Mark Rydall. Okay, there's also Doug Chapman and Drew Hansen, but they don't exactly qualify as major contributors — we'll combine them to make one player. Six against two, BYU wins. Don't underestimate the power of hate — it can be a great motivator.

And if this doesn't convince you that BYU will win, I've got one more reason — BYU is finally over the shock of seeing Van Horn's funny looking 'do. It was so distracting the first time, they couldn't concentrate on the basket.

So there you have it, hate and hair — two elements which are critical in any good rivalry.

Rebounding reigns in rivalry

By MATT WRIGHT
Sports Editor

One of the most common ways of predicting the outcome of a sports contest is to see how the two teams match up on paper. When BYU meets the University of Utah in the Marriott Center Saturday night, the Cougars hope the old adage is true that 'games are not won on paper.'

With coach Roger Reid telling the media from day one that Utah is the class of the league, it has been no surprise that the Utes have cruised to the top of the WAC rankings with a 14-3 record. Utah leads the WAC in five different categories, including scoring defense and rebounding margin — more on rebounding later.

BYU, on paper and on the court, has taken a different route this season, finishing the regular season in the middle of the pack at 9-8. The Cougars have had a high scoring offense this season, leading the WAC in the category, but they also rank second to last in scoring defense.

What exactly do all these statistics tell us about the game Saturday? If you listen to the players, absolutely nothing.

"It is going to be a great game this Saturday. They have the No. 10 team in America," Randy Reid said. "But that's the thing I think about the Utah/BYU rivalry, you really have to throw out the records and rankings."

Entering his second game of the rivalry since transferring to BYU, Bryon Ruffner agrees with Reid.

"I don't think it matters what they are ranked, they still have the same team if they are ranked No. 1 or No. 100. We just have to go out and play and do what we didn't do last time — we have to rebound harder."

In the first game of the two-game series, held in Salt Lake, BYU led much of the game, but gave it up in the end when Utah's taller personnel outrebounded them. The battle of the boards should loom large in the rematch.

"In the first game I think Utah beat us on the boards by about 25," Roberts said. "We really spent a lot of practice time on rebounding — being smaller inside you really have to concentrate on getting those bigger bodies away from the basket."

In a rivalry that has been characterized by tough, sometimes down-right dirty play, the current teams have a level of respect on and off the court.

"I like to play against the (Utah) guys, they are friendly guys to me. I have run into some of them off the floor," Roberts said. "We are competitors, and everybody loves to win, but nobody wants to hurt each other."

Mark Rydall, the only member of Utah's current team that has beaten the Cougars in Provo, said the same.

Women have their own BYU/Utah hoop rivalry

Encouraged by a victory over San Diego State and good play against Colorado State, the Cougars will meet the Utes today in their final home game at 7 p.m.

In their first meeting, the Cougars played the Utes tough the first half trailing by seven points at halftime, but lost the game against the Utes 72-42. Despite the loss, the Cougars are confident they can compete with Utah.

"I feel good about this team," head coach Soni Adams said. "We played good against San Diego State and we controlled our own destiny in the game. It was a real confidence builder for the team."

Assistant coach Barbara Ehardt believes the team has made some improvements since the first meeting with the Utes.

"The first game was early enough in the season that we were still learning our defense," she said. "Now, we are more solid defensively. We also run the fast break better because we emphasize it more."

The Cougars are confident against Utah despite the Utes' first place position in the WAC. Senior Behka Stafford believes that the Utes ranking could help the Cougars.

"One good thing is that we are at the very bottom of the WAC and they are tied for first place, so we don't have any pressure on us," she said. "If we show up, there is a good chance for us to beat them. The pressure is all on them."

Senior forward Kim Anderson agrees.

"We are in last place in the WAC, so we have nothing to lose," said Anderson. "There is no reason for us to come out and play tight and if we come out and play loose, we will play a good game."

Ehardt believes a victory hinges on the Cougars strengths in defense and pushing the ball up the court.

"If we are to compete with them it is because we play defense well and we run," she said. "If Cindy sets the tone for us and really gets after it, we do a better job of pressuring the ball and I think the key is defense."

Coach Adams believes if the team gets going early and plays together they can win.

"When we are on track, we are unstoppable," Adams said. "It just depends on what we do to ourselves, because when we play together the sky is the limit."

The last home game of the season has special meaning for the seniors on the team especially against their arch-rival. As freshman, seniors Tiani Shoemaker, Stafford and Anderson beat Utah three times. The final victory of that season was in the WAC tournament for the conference championship.

"The rivalry has been awesome for me from my freshman year," Anderson said. "This last game against Utah has been emotional for me. I am so excited, yet it is sad because it is my last game."

Stafford savors the rivalry, also.

"Against Utah it is always more exciting when you win and more embarrassing when you lose," Stafford said. "I think it is a good game to end on. There is no one I would rather finish against."

out and the whole student body is there. They're cheering; they're screaming at you; they're yelling at you; they're saying all kinds of things; they're going crazy. It takes a special kind of courage and strength of character to be able to concentrate and block those things out in that kind of hostile environment. And no one can truly appreciate what it is like unless you are on the floor in that type of situation. When you have a chance to pull out a win, it is just one of the highlights of my athletic career."

Reid has two favorite games from the rivalry. The first was a 96-65 thrashing of the Utes in the 1993-94 Conference tournament, a game in which Reid scored his career high of 26 points. "We had our basketball team clicking on all cylinders," Reid said. "It was a chance for us just to play really well. It was an unbelievable performance for our guys."

The other game was a 64-62 win at Utah in the same year.

"Robbie (Reid) hit the shot at the end of the ball game to put away the victory from about 40 feet, and I just remember thinking 'Oh my goodness, what in the world is he doing? The shot went in and I just had the feeling of having them beating them on their horizontal."

Not all the memories are happy, however. Roberts recalls a memory. "I'd have to say my freshman year when they beat me because I was kind of a of them hitting the last guard Josh Grant a screen on Nate Call, who was Jimmy Soto, and I did help at all, and Jimmy Soto to my left and hit a nice layup. So I'll always remember."

Reid says the bad part is how it can bring out the people.

"The rivalry can turn and make them say things in a way that I don't think they really act," Reid said. "It feels tragic because you see the players, coaches and promoters respect each other. I think when people carry that the bounds of good sportsmanship, terms of profanity and just treating other people in a way that is not right in any circumstance."

Women's gymnastics ready at No. 5 ranking on line

JODI ORGILL
Universe Sports Writer

At the beginning of the season, the BYU women's gymnastics team had a lot of confidence. Improving on its No. 5 national ranking, the team has been receiving consistent scores throughout the season. Looking forward to adding to its success, the team is always fun to be in. Even at away meets, the team is looking forward to adding to its success. The girls are confident about Saturday in the Smith Center at 7 p.m. against Utah State.

"We pull together as a team well and support each other," Senior Cassie Balser has had been watching the team during practices due to an injury to her knee that will temporarily keep her from competing. "I think everyone looks really good. It should be a fun and exciting meet. We are looking better than ever, and everyone's spirits are up," Balser said. With the high scores BYU has been earning throughout the meet, other teams see BYU as a potential threat, Balser said. "I think because of our high scores, there is less pressure on the girls. Even if we blow a meet, we still have good enough scores to get to regionals," coach Brad Cattermole said. "Now everyone is concentrating on the little deductions and upgrading routines. The girls just want to go for it."

Arizona tournament, with the team doing better in the end. "We still had a bad round," Howard said in response to this reversal. "If we get lucky the snow will melt and we will get a chance to practice outside a couple times before our next tournament." The next match for the BYU women's golf team is at the San Diego State Spring Classic on March 11 and 12. "We played well as a team," Howard said. "We had a disappointing first round, which held them back from their improvement in the following rounds. Our second round was our second, and we played well as a team." Howard said. "We had a disappointing first round, which held them back from their improvement in the following rounds. Our second round was our second, and we played well as a team."

Lacrosse opens against league champ

By JARED CAPSON
Universe Sports Writer

Colorado College visits Provo Saturday for what BYU men's lacrosse coach Jason Lamb touts as the biggest lacrosse game ever in the state of Utah. Undeclared last year, Colorado College is the defending Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Lacrosse League (RMILL) champion and has won the league title three of the last four years. "They're the best team we'll play this year, without a doubt," BYU co-captain Brian Rolapp said. "They've traditionally been the top team ever since we've been in the league." The caliber of talent that will be fielded by both teams and the league title implications are what make this game so important, Lamb said. Saturday's game will be the first of the year for the Cougars. Two weeks ago BYU had two games scheduled in California but rain forced the cancellation of both games. Despite the lack of game preparation, Lamb feels BYU is ready to play. "Without a doubt we are more prepared than we've ever been to match up with Colorado College," Lamb said. "As long as we stay focused, follow our game plan and don't make mistakes, we should put ourselves in a position to beat them." The game is scheduled for 1 p.m. at Helaman Field, located south of the Football stadium and north of the outdoor track. Tickets are $3 for non-students and $2 for students.

Serving to be crucial vs. Utes

By SEAN SUNDWALL
Universe Sports Writer

After a convincing 7-0 victory over Utah State Thursday night, the men's tennis team is set to host Utah tomorrow in hopes of avenging an early season loss to the Utes. In the Jan. 26 match against Utah, the Cougars managed to win only two matches, losing 5-2. The Achilles heel in that match for the Cougars was their service game. "Against Utah we just have to serve better with a higher percentage of first serves," coach Jim Osborne said. BYU's biggest gun, Boris Bosnjakovic, is serving the best he has all year, and, for the Cougars, it couldn't have come at a better time. His serve has been clocked as high as 120 mph. In his match against San Diego State, Bosnjakovic had a streak of three games where he got 14 straight first serves in, including four aces and five unreturned serves. "I told Boris that's tour quality tennis," Osborne said. "He's capable of doing that on his serve if he stays relaxed." BYU will need that type of dominance if they expect to upset the Utes on Saturday. "Boris personally and teamwise needs a win. The problem with Boris against (Utah's) Svensson is he gets too tight and feels like he has to play perfect tennis," Osborne said. According to Osborne, the tone for the entire match will be set by BYU's performance in the doubles matches. The match is slated to begin at 6 p.m. on Saturday on the indoor courts.

Spikers hope to make a playoff run

By MATT MOLEN
Universe Sports Writer

After a week of no action, the 11th-ranked BYU men's volleyball team hopes to make a push for the playoffs in the second half of the season by pushing around UC San Diego today. UC San Diego brings a 1-10 record to Provo, and has never beaten BYU. Cougar head coach Carl McGown said UC San Diego is a young team with little experience. "San Diego is a fairly new team in the league," McGown said. "When you're new it is very difficult to compete in this league. They just don't have all the resources yet." McGown knows what he's talking about. BYU began NCAA competition in 1990 and went 1-15 in the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation (MPSF).

But the Cougars aren't taking UC San Diego lightly. McGown said his team had an intense series of practices during their week off. "We are getting ready for a push to the playoffs," McGown said. "We want to be playing great to the end of the season." McGown said the Cougars have been working on just about every aspect of their game, including serving, blocking and defense. BYU will need a strong push for the playoffs if it is going to see post-season play. Six of the nine remaining teams on their schedule are nationally ranked. McGown said the Cougars will be short-handed for Friday night's game because a couple of players were suspended for different infractions. He declined to comment further. The match begins at 7:00 p.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Phillips ends season; returns to Sox

Associated Press

ATLANTA, Fla. (AP) - Tony Phillips, who abruptly announced his departure from baseball, changed his mind and will return to the Chicago White Sox. Phillips left the Chicago's spring training complex Saturday and returned to his home in Scottsdale, Ariz., for family reasons, and later he was retiring. Phillips' departure was a short one. On Friday night, Phillips phoned Sox general manager Ron Kittle and said he'd like to rejoin the team. Phillips is a 36-year-old left fielder who has played two years, $3.6 million with the Sox on Jan. 20, is expected to be back in camp on Monday. Phillips said he called his agent, "He called me, said he was over, and said there was no way he would give up baseball now. I knew that deep down, Tony still wants to play." Phillips will be no fine or other punishment awaiting Phillips when he returns to the White Sox. As for hard work, there appear to be none. Phillips is happy he's going to be back in the White Sox manager Terry Francona. "I'm happy things worked out in this family because Tony is a professional. The reason we got him back is because we thought he'd be an asset to this team."

S UP: Steve Forbes and his daughter, Elizabeth, give a thumbs up from their campaign bus to supporters as they leave a campaign appearance in Peoria, Ariz., Tuesday. GOP candidates will face voters in South Carolina in anticipation of the state's primaries.

GOP campaigning in S.C.; candidates gang up on Dole

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Debating on a decidedly conservative turf Thursday, Republican presidential hopefuls defended all-male schools and the displaying of the Confederate flag and talked tough about cutting government and confronting Cuba. Three ganged up to label Bob Dole a chronic tax-raiser.

"Don't malign my integrity here," was Dole's retort. He recalled his Senate role enacting Ronald Reagan's tax cuts and fighting President Clinton's 1993 tax increase.

The combative lunch-hour debate brought the four leading Republicans together just two days before South Carolina's primary — a must-win event in Dole's comeback strategy and the scene-setter for voting in nine states on Tuesday.

There was no doubt that the candidates recognized the stakes, as they often interrupted to rebut rivals. Nor was there any doubt that the campaign had shifted to the solidly conservative South.

At one point, publisher Steve Forbes and Lamar Alexander had a shouting match over Alexander's personal finances and the tax increases he adopted as Tennessee governor. Dole, defending his lead here, repeatedly interrupted rivals to counter their criticisms and twice noted that he alone among the candidates has served in the active military.

Polls show Buchanan running a solid second in South Carolina, with Forbes and Alexander battling for third. Even third could prove lethal to Alexander's candidacy, and his urgent tone made clear he knew the likely price of placing fourth.

"He talks like a conservative and acts like a liberal," Forbes said of Alexander. As they glared and pointed fingers, Forbes suggested Alexander had participated in several sweetheart investment deals while he was governor.

More often than not, however, Forbes and Alexander were partners against Dole. And they received eager assistance from Buchanan, who was only an occasional target this time after coming under consistent attack at a forum last week in Arizona.

Session misses some critical issues

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Utahns got a taste of the 1996 General Session of the Utah Legislature, which opened at midnight. One is a modest 1 percent tax cut. Another is a budget that funds most state programs like never before.

What's the heavy dose of morality? Dozens of other measures landed on the House and Senate calendars. Some touted all session priorities — legislators debated two anti-abortion bills, aimed at keeping gay clubs out of state's public schools and a "sin tax" on cigarettes.

After midnight, the Senate passed a bill that would create the Bonneville cutthroat trout.

Some critical pieces of legislation were left on the gavel at midnight. Its sound had reverberated in the Senate chamber when Gov. Mitt Romney announced he would call a special session to finish what was left unfinished.

Going to need to come back to finish some of these critical bills, Leavitt, who was particularly vocal that the Senate and House concur on a way to give the state and counties some optionality.

"It's a real possibility," he said.

"It's likely."

Anyway, the hectic last night of the 45-day session itself. Legislators tackled some important and tough issues, from funding the state's crumbling highway infrastructure to streamlining the welfare system into a new Department of Workforce Services.

They passed a record Fiscal Year 1997 $5.3 billion budget that saw more than $110 million for highway construction and put nearly $300 million more into public schools than last year, including a $52 million appropriation specifically designed to reduce class-sizes in the state with the largest student-teacher ratio in America.

Public employees got a 4 percent cost-of-living raise and teachers saw a 4 percent increase in the Weighted Pupil Unit, the funding mechanism for public schools which includes their salaries. Members of the Executive and Judicial branches of government, including the governor and his department heads, also got a 4 percent raise.

Yet, to be fair, the Legislature pretty much delivered what was promised at the beginning of the session.

There was a lot of posturing early on, but Utahns will see their income taxes reduced by $50 million and their property taxes drop by $40 million. Another $10 million in miscellaneous other taxes were chopped, including the reinstatement of tax exemptions for coin-operated car washes, Laundromats and amusement games.

Nobody was allowed to forget the 51st Legislature was convened during the state's Centennial.

Utah Legislature funds golf course by mistake

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Legislature unknowingly funded $1 million toward a golf course in the district of House Speaker Mel Brown after leaders sneaked the money into a bill that passed in the final minutes of the session.

The cash was contained in Senate Bill 251, the so-called "Bill of Bills," which traditionally is the final appropriations act that funds new or pet projects debated, prioritized and passed as bills during the 45-day general session.

But in this case, Brown and other leaders acknowledged Thursday there was no bill, no debate and its priority was determined by a few powerful budget-writers behind closed doors in management meetings.

"I was not aware there was any more money available," said Sen. David Steele, R-West Point, who co-chairs the High Education Appropriations Committee.

None of the five people ultimately responsible for building the budget can recall exactly who put the golf course in the bill.

The bill arrived in the House with less than 15 minutes remaining in the session. Several lawmakers complained they hadn't had a chance to read it and some didn't even have a copy.

Diana agrees to give up 'Her Royal Highness' title

Associated Press

LONDON — Just how royal will Diana be once she's divorced her husband, Prince Charles? Will she still be colonel-in-chief of the Welsh Guards, jokingly the "Squidgies?"

Hostesses may already be out where exactly one seat at the princess who is the mother of the future king of England, the palace will clarify.

And even more important money, for example — will she be settled before Prince Charles unties the marital knot that will look more like a noose with every passing week.

No sooner had Diana agreed on Wednesday to give Charles the divorce he wanted, than she and Buckingham Palace squabbled about what had been decided.

Diana was so distraught Thursday that she pulled out of an official dinner, something royals never do if they can stand on two feet.

But the princess was "very upset and decidedly sad," her spokeswoman Jane Atkinson said. "The princess would prefer a few days of quiet before she picks up her public engagements again — any woman would."

Diana's announcement Wednesday

made clear she expects to keep a title and a firm grip on her status as a Very Important Princess.

She would be Diana, Princess of Wales, would continue to live at Kensington Palace and would continue to have an office at St. James's Palace, where her husband lives and works.

Ms. Atkinson also said Diana has agreed to relinquish those three coveted initials HRH, which stand for Her Royal Highness, and apply only to the uppermost echelon of the royal family.

Buckingham Palace, apparently nettled by a pre-emptive strike, said none of this had been agreed on.

Church history in Africa chronicled

By STEVE JENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

With Thursday ending Black History Month, it's the perfect opportunity to bring to light the efforts of one BYU religion faculty member to inform the LDS community about the history of the LDS Church in Africa.

Dale LeBaron, associate professor of church history, is writing his second book about his first-hand experience with the explosion of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Africa.

Serving as LDS mission president in 1978 over the only mission in Africa at the time — Johannesburg, South Africa — LeBaron witnessed the rapid growth that occurred with the revelation by LDS President Spencer W. Kimball allowing blacks to receive the priesthood.

"The restoration of the priesthood was basically the restoration of the gospel for the people in black Africa," LeBaron said.

He said the 1978 LDS Church population in Africa was about 11,000 — all white. But today there are more than 96,000 African Latter-day Saints — nearly 90 percent black.

He said that in the 20 years preceding the 1978 revelation, there were more inquiry letters coming to Salt Lake City from Nigeria and Ghana requesting information about the LDS Church than from everywhere else in the world combined.

"These people were so receptive to spiritual things that whenever they came in contact with LDS members in European countries many would just immediately recognize that it was true," LeBaron said.

He said the Africans would return to their hometowns to share what they had learned about the LDS Church. Soon there were congregations springing up all over Nigeria and Ghana calling themselves "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints."

"It was just like popcorn popping up," he said.

The LDS Church is now registered in 27 of the 50 sub-Saharan African nations, LeBaron said. Membership is even skyrocketing to the point that in some areas the church has established a quota limiting the number of baptisms each month.

"It's so that we don't outgrow ourselves," he said. "They need to have enough time to develop leadership."

In years past, LeBaron has given presentations and lectures at BYU during Black History Month about his experiences in Africa.

Homosexual issue prompts passing of House bill

By BECKY FLETCHER
Universe Staff Writer

At the stroke of midnight Wednesday, the Utah House of Representatives passed a bill banning teachers from encouraging or promoting illegal conduct.

After more than 40 minutes of heated debate, the House passed the bill 49-18. It now awaits the signature of Gov. Mike Leavitt.

"I haven't seen the bill, but I support the concept," the governor said in an Associated Press story.

The bill is the latest event in a string of reactions resulting from East High School student Kelli Peterson's petition for an extracurricular club called the Gay-Straight Alliance.

Homosexuality has been a source of continuing debate in Congress and Salt Lake public schools throughout February because, according to Utah law, it is considered illegal to be caught in the act of sodomy.

Rather than allow clubs for gay and lesbian students in secondary schools, the Salt Lake School Board voted last week to eliminate clubs not tied to courses taught in the school district.

The bill, created by Sen. Craig Taylor, R-Kaysville, was argued by House Republicans as a way to simply protect students against unlawful activity, but Democrats call the legislation unconstitutional.

Minority Leader Frank Pignatelli, R-Salt Lake City, questioned how the bill would affect gay teachers and said it amounted to a "witch hunt."

"You are taking away teachers' rights to conduct their private lives," he said.

Majority Whip Michael Waddoups, R-Salt Lake City, defended the bill, saying it would only apply to activities that disrupted school.

"If (a teacher's homosexuality) impacted his classroom or teaching or other circumstances, it could lead to action by the district," said Granite School District spokesman Kent Gardner.

Under school policy, a teacher's sexual orientation is not grounds for dismissal.

Earlier this week, a homosexual Skyline High School debate teacher announced the formation of the Gay-Straight Teachers' Alliance.

WOING VOTES: Kristian Watford, left, and Peter Miller talked to voters after a BYUSA presidential debate Thursday. Watford, who is one of the four presidential candidates, said he wants to create an ideas booth. Miller, a vice-presidential candidate, wants to create a student handbook to increase awareness of activities. They would like to see freshmen integrate more easily into university life.

BYUSA presidential and vice-presidential candidates said that although their platform ideas may seem difficult to achieve, they are still possible.

Candidates were asked questions about their platforms by Student Advisory Council members at a debate Thursday.

Randy Ewell, BYUSA presidential candidate, said "Freshmen have so many opportunities to be part of the campus. When transfer students come — nothing."

Kathy Terwiske was asked about bringing concerts to BYU. "We'd have to work heavily with the administration, but it is possible."

Jeremy Bahr, presidential candidate, was asked about his idea to unify BYUSA, the Student Leadership Involvement Center and the Wright Leadership Seminar. He said he had met with Alton Wade, who told him to run on the principle, and they would work out the details later.

Bahr was also asked about the Service Learning Center he would like to create. The center was suggested by the Self-Study, Bahr said. Students could call up and ask for a service project with a specific learning outcome.

When asked if he would work hard to implement his ideas if he did not get elected, Bahr said, "I don't have to worry about it because I'm going to be elected."

Freshman Rob Porter, Bahr's vice-presidential running mate, said that as the current freshman class president, he has had sufficient leadership experience for the position. He said he will wait to serve a mission because he will not turn 19 until October.

Presidential candidate Stephen Whyte and running mate Erin Enke talked about using BYU vans to transport students to the airport at holiday and break times.

"We'd get volunteers to drive the vans," Whyte said. "The only real costs would be advertising and gas at about 40 cents a gallon."

"The Utah Transit Office has offered to help with the advertising costs," Enke said.

Kristian Watford, presidential candidate, said he wants to combat general student apathy by creating an ideas booth.

Watford and his running mate, Peter Miller, would also like to create a student handbook that would help raise awareness of activities. They would also like to see freshmen integrate more easily into university life.

session itself. Legislators tackled some important and tough issues, from funding the state's crumbling highway infrastructure to streamlining the welfare system into a new Department of Workforce Services.

They passed a record Fiscal Year 1997 $5.3 billion budget that saw more than $110 million for highway construction and put nearly $300 million more into public schools than last year, including a $52 million appropriation specifically designed to reduce class-sizes in the state with the largest student-teacher ratio in America.

Public employees got a 4 percent cost-of-living raise and teachers saw a 4 percent increase in the Weighted Pupil Unit, the funding mechanism for public schools which includes their salaries. Members of the Executive and Judicial branches of government, including the governor and his department heads, also got a 4 percent raise.

Yet, to be fair, the Legislature pretty much delivered what was promised at the beginning of the session.

There was a lot of posturing early on, but Utahns will see their income taxes reduced by $50 million and their property taxes drop by $40 million. Another $10 million in miscellaneous other taxes were chopped, including the reinstatement of tax exemptions for coin-operated car washes, Laundromats and amusement games.

Nobody was allowed to forget the 51st Legislature was convened during the state's Centennial.

Utah Legislature funds golf course by mistake

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Legislature unknowingly funded $1 million toward a golf course in the district of House Speaker Mel Brown after leaders sneaked the money into a bill that passed in the final minutes of the session.

The cash was contained in Senate Bill 251, the so-called "Bill of Bills," which traditionally is the final appropriations act that funds new or pet projects debated, prioritized and passed as bills during the 45-day general session.

But in this case, Brown and other leaders acknowledged Thursday there was no bill, no debate and its priority was determined by a few powerful budget-writers behind closed doors in management meetings.

"I was not aware there was any more money available," said Sen. David Steele, R-West Point, who co-chairs the High Education Appropriations Committee.

None of the five people ultimately responsible for building the budget can recall exactly who put the golf course in the bill.

The bill arrived in the House with less than 15 minutes remaining in the session. Several lawmakers complained they hadn't had a chance to read it and some didn't even have a copy.

Diana agrees to give up 'Her Royal Highness' title

Associated Press

LONDON — Just how royal will Diana be once she's divorced? Her Royal Highness? Or will she still be colonel-in-chief of the Queen's army regiment, jokingly called the "Squidgies?"

Hostesses may already be plotting where exactly one seat at the princess who is the mother of the future king of England. The palace will clarify.

And even more important money, for example — will she be settled before Prince Charles unties the marital knot that has made her look more like a noose

with every passing week.

No sooner had Diana agreed on Wednesday to give Charles the divorce he wanted than she and Buckingham Palace squabbled about what had been decided.

Diana was so distraught Thursday that she pulled out of an official dinner, something royals never do if they can stand on two feet.

But the princess was "very upset and decidedly sad," her spokeswoman Jane Atkinson said. "The princess would prefer a few days of quiet before she picks up her public engagements again — any woman would."

Diana's announcement Wednesday

made clear she expects to keep a title and a firm grip on her status as a Very Important Princess.

She would be Diana, Princess of Wales, would continue to live at Kensington Palace and would continue to have an office at St. James's Palace, where her husband lives and works.

Ms. Atkinson also said Diana has agreed to relinquish those three coveted initials HRH, which stand for Her Royal Highness, and apply only to the uppermost echelon of the royal family.

Buckingham Palace, apparently nettled by a pre-emptive strike, said none of this had been agreed on.
